

By hand

Reading a future in water un-clouded,
seeing God's will
in the wave of her hair,
unbound, untied,
risking the cliffs of her shoulder,
splayed and dry
as a paintbrush
pressed on blank paper, speaking, but speaking
unsure
unsteady;
childhood script
unpracticed in summer.